

GAYLA SCRIVENER

MARKETING PROJECT MANAGER

Gayla Scrivener is the owner of Scrivener Solutions, a marketing agency that helps coaches, consultants, and solopreneurs implement their content plans by taking care of the tedious details involved in consistently publishing. While you focus on your message, Gayla's team takes care of the tech and ensures your message is published everywhere you need it to be: website, social media, and email.

Having worked in the medical industry for 20 years, Gayla managed offices of various sizes and specialties. She led teams through numerous software conversions and guided staff in creating systems to keep up with the ever-changing world of technology.

Gayla desired more out of life and made a major career pivot to create her work-from-anywhere lifestyle. She left the corporate world of medical management, sold practically everything, moved into a 38-foot RV full-time, and started her own business. She leveraged her experience in system building and operations to help small business owners by serving as their back-office marketing team, without the hassle of hiring and managing several individuals.

Nowadays, Gayla lives her digital nomad life discovering and experiencing different parts of the country, while leading her virtual team and helping her clients implement their content marketing strategies. To get to know Gayla, learn the practical side of content marketing systems and productivity, and share her journey of achieving work-from-anywhere freedom, subscribe to her podcast, Live Full Work Fun.